SUBJECT: Presidential Meeting with Arab and Muslim-American Community Representatives

As we discussed today, Scheduling has recently turned down the latest (9503329) in a succession of requests we have submitted for a meeting between the President and representatives of the Arab and Muslim-American community. Jim Zogby (Arab-American Institute) and Khalil Jashan (National Association of Arab-Americans) have reiterated their long-standing request for such a meeting. All previous such requests over the past two years have been regretted; the Vice President met once with a small delegation of leaders following the Hebron Mosque massacre last year.

COPY

In the aftermath of the Oklahoma City bombing, Arab and Muslim-American leaders were put on the defensive by early media and "terrorism expert" speculation on Islamic extremist responsibility for the attack. The community leadership is very appreciative of the President's comments cautioning against such accusations (and the Administration's overall position on Islam), but are concerned at the possible negative implications of pending counter-terrorism legislation for Arab and Muslim-American groups and activities. The leadership is also concerned over the pace of progress in the Middle East peace process and will wish to hear the President's views on the status of negotiations.

The President has met on several occasions with various Jewish-American leadership groups (most recently with the World Jewish Congress, AJC and AIPAC); we believe that a meeting with a small delegation of Arab and Muslim-American leaders would send a positive signal of Administration interest in community concerns and urge support for our counter-terrorism and peace process policies. OVP and Public Liaison support our request for reconsideration of the meeting rejection.

Subject: OK City mtg.

Marcia Hale held a mtg. this afternoon to discuss the President's involvement w/the second anniversary of the bombing of the Murrah Building. The city is not asking him to come to Oklahoma. They have asked that he make a personal donation to the Oklahoma City Memorial Foundation (which will fund the construction of the memorial to the victims of the bombings) and encourage federal employees to do the same. Counsel wasn't too comfortable w/that so the current idea is to have him send an appropriate floral arrangement and a letter to the people of Oklahoma City on 4/19. The letter could be provided to Oklahoma papers in advance to run on 4/19. In addition, POTUS would issue an executive directive on crisis preparation and response to the heads of federal departments and agencies. According to Cabinet Affairs, the directives genesis was discussions at the first anniversary of the bombing. On 4/19 OK City will announce 5 finalists for the design of the memorial. The winning design will be announced on 7/4.

Counsel was clear that of all days to draw attention to this event 4/19 is the most appropriate and the day when we will take the least heat for interfering w/the trial process. Aside from this it seems that we should lie low on this topic.

Marcia is going to draft a memo on the subject and circulate for comment.

Thanks. I think the best think you can do is "Gore as one of the guys."

The reason the White House Staff has rallied behind Gore at his time of need is because Gore is part of the team. Anecdotes of him dealing with you on key issues or events would be helpful. I am trying to knock down the idea that the Clinton White House's support for Gore is based on legacy-notions, and build up the idea that it is based on respect, relationships, and in-the-foxhole commaradarie.

One good speech anecdote concerns the Oklahoma City Bombing Victim who was kicked out of his office due to the government shutdown, Richard Dean. You will recall that many around here made fun of Gore's push for this item, and until very late in the day, this idea appeared in SoU drafts as "Gore anecdote." But it turned out to be one of the most powerful moments of the 96 SoU, and a key moment in the budget battle. This anecdote rebuts the charge that Gore lacks a Clinton-type of feel for political rhetoric.

On issues, you should emphasize his relentless -- perhaps even numbling-steadfast -- push for his issues in Presidential speeches and events. The environment, science/technology, ReGo, urban/empowerment, wiring the schools, etc. Gore was Mr. Faithful in pushing these concerns.

These are some ideas. Let me know how it goes. Also, some kind words about his very competent staff are always welcome.....

Mickey,

AG is going to Ok. City. As of now, she is NOT staying for the terrorism summit. NSC apparently got some bad poop from the Foundation. We will finalize this tomorrow afternoon and I will let you know.

Also, looks like AG will travel w. VP to Oklahoma City. She goes on to Denver.

I understand the AG is confirmed for Oklahoma City on October 25 for the groundbreaking ceremony for the memorial Foundation there. The VP will be present as well. I also was told that the AG will stay for the Terrorism Summit after the ceremony. I have NSC working with the Foundation on this.

It's stupid that neither BC nor AG is attending this funeral. ESPECIALLY AG, it's such an easy home run in the largest democratic part of the state, with the largest assemblage of Democrats in the state ever at one time. Why wouldn't the VP want the support of Oklahoma Democrats? Obviously, we're not Texas, Ohio, California, Florida, New York, or Michigan (where the VP is choosing to go instead).. but why piss an entire state's Dem population off?

It's fucking stupid. The 4 P's go to the funeral of a Republican Senator in Rhode Island but everyone skips this one. I'm pissed. And if I'm pissed, David Walters must be fuming.. and he runs the Democratic money in the state (I don't, coincidentally). Too bad...

Anyway, the President's being invited to the 5th Anniv and Grand Opening of the National Bombing Memorial in OKC on April 19, 2000. I'm sure the white boys and co. will say, "They hate us in Oklahoma, no way .. Next issue?" I assume Mr. Ibarra will support it, and I'd imagine some electeds may be calling your office as the date approaches!

Thanks for letting me vent darlin'...

I need your advice. April 19 is the fifth anniversary of the Oklahoma City Bombing. The President and Congress established a Presidential group that oversees the Oklahoma City national Memorial Trust. The memorial which this trust oversees is being dedicated on April 19. Should the President attend? I don't have any current politicals to ask so can you find out an answer for me? The President has been personally involved with Oklahoma City residents as you know but this Trust is mainly R's and friends of the current Mayor and Governor.

I know we have no choice if this is something the President wants to do, but this is something we don't normally do. The only exceptions I'm aware of are the Oklahoma City bombing, an Amtrak crash where Job Corps young people were killed, and disasters where military or other gov't personnel were involved. This could create a difficult precedent in view of the number of deaths that occur each year in plane crashes, etc.

Mayor Norick of Oklahoma City has requested that the President send a letter to be read at a small wreath laying ceremony on the anniversary of the Murrah Federal Building bombing on April 19, 1997. At the low key ceremony on April 19, 1997, the Mayor will announce the five finalists for the design of the Memorial. The City has decided not to hold a large public ceremony this year because the trial of the accused bomber has already begun. Therefore, the City is not requesting that you participate in any public event. In addition, White House Counsel advises that you do not participate in any public events regarding the bombing while the trial is occurring.

The Board of the Memorial Fund would like to meet with you in Washington, DC sometime in the spring. The final design for the Memorial will be selected in July, 1997. The trial is expected to be concluded by that time.

I recommend that the President send a letter to be read by XXXXXXXX in Oklahoma City on April 19, 1997 and that he meet with the Board of the Memorial Fund in July, 1997.

Let the record show that the Oklahoma City event has just begun and the skies over the South Lawn are clear and blue.

Every event is a different case, but an event with 35 people should be seen as flexible enough to make an optimistic judgement call and respond quickly if things turn unfavorable.

Today, with the President speaking in front of a tree he planted two years ago to honor the victims of the Oklahoma City Bombing, it would have been an image long remembered to symbolize his commitment to the survivors.

It is unfortunate that we missed that opportunity due to an unnecessary overabundance of caution. With thirtyfive people to move a few hundred feet, what is the worst that would have happened?

Message Creation Date was at 16-APR-1996 19:27:00

This afternoon, we heard from our OK City Lead Advance and City Councilman Mark Schwartz (our contact in OK) that there was a small, but growing sentiment amongst several (@ 25) people who were upset that the Gores would be participating in the processional walk. These people contacted Lee Ann Jenkins, Director of the FEB (Federal Executive Board) which is the association that serves as the umbrella group for all of the OK federal agencies. The people concerned about the Gores attendance were federal emp loyees who were in the Murrah building at the time of the bombing.

After talking to several people, we were able to ascertain that there were people who were uncomfortable with the Gores walking. Mark Schwartz felt that while he vetted and floated the ideas with many of the families, maybe it wasn't as large a group as it should have been when making this decision. The recommendation from OK was that we not do the walk.

Needless to say, we have made the decision to cut the walk from our schedule.

I think you would all agree that the last thing we want to do is appear to be opportunistic, or intrusive in a grieving process and day that is so painful to so many people. I also think that if we did do this, and ended up with several angry or upset people, it could reflect extremely poorly on the Gores.

Regarding the schedule, we will go back to observing a moment of silence on the plane, doing a meeting with federal workers, doing the memorial service, stopping by the Murrah site, and departing.

Thanks

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

From: Katie McGinty and Brian Johnson

Subject: Questions and answers on the environment (Hearst Interview)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Attached are Q/A on the following topics, the first three of which are most likely to be asked:

- o General - Why all this sudden talk about the environment?
- o Budget
- o Timber salvage
- o Arctic National Wildlife Refuge
- o Regulatory reform
- o Superfund
- o Safe Drinking Water
- o Endangered species
- o Grazing
- o WA: Columbia River Salmon/Bonneville Power
- o CA: Ward Valley, Bay

-Delta/Central Valley Project, Coastal Salmon

OUR MESSAGE. Following are the points that we should try to make whenever we talk about the environment:

The GOP leadership is:

- o Seeking to roll back 25 years of bipartisan progress on health, safety, and the environment
- o Turning over the legislative process to lobbyists for special interests and polluters, who are even writing bills

By contrast, we're seeking to protect public health and reinvent environmental programs (eliminating 16,000 pages of regulations, cutting paperwork 25% etc.)

ENVIRONMENT -- GENERAL

Q: GENERAL. You are talking more about the environment. Why?

COPY

A: For decades, health and environmental protection has been a bipartisan effort, and it's a great American success story. But now some Republicans in Congress are trying to roll back 25 years of progress. They've given unprecedented power to lobbyists for polluters. They've pushed bills to re

-write the Clean Water Act to allow more toxins and sewage into our rivers and a so

-called "regulatory reform" bill that would loosen standards for safe food and water. Now, in their most outrageous act yet, they're using the budget as a back door way to open up special interest loopholes in environmental laws.

Q: BUDGET. Why are you making such a big deal about the GOP environmental budget?

A: The GOP environmental budgets are a sellout to special interests and polluters at the expense of public health. In the House

-passed EPA budget, lobbyists secured 18 different loopholes to protect their interests -- allowing oil refineries to belch hazardous wastes into our air, factories to dump millions of pounds of toxic chemicals into the water, and polluters to hide information about the toxins they release into their neighboring communities. It would effectively end federal enforcement of the Clean Water and Clean Air Acts. On natural resource issues they want to sell off national parks, drill in the Arctic Refuge, and give away the taxpayers gold and minerals at pennies on the dollar.

BACKGROUND: Environmental budget issues by bill:
VA/HUD (EPA) -- Water funding (37

-100%), cleaning up toxic dumps (36%), enforcement (50% House), right to know (rider in House), environmental technologies (80

-100%).
Interior Appropriations (DOI, DOE, USFS) -- Mining giveaways, Tongass overcutting, California Desert sabotage, Columbia River Basin salmon, Timber programs (expanding the coverage from rescissions bill), Indian affairs, energy conservation (40%).

Q: TIMBER SALVAGE -- Basic. How do you expect people to take your new

-found environmental toughness seriously when you flip

-flopped on the timber salvage language in the rescissions bill?

A. When I took office, public lands in the Pacific Northwest had been tied up for years with gridlock over timber policies. I worked hard to achieve some balance in the seemingly endless battle between industry and environmentalists. I opposed the timber salvage provision you speak of precisely because it threatened to return the region to lawsuits and gridlock. The Congress chose to attach it to legislation that included important budget cuts and aid to the victims of the Oklahoma City bombing. I was able to accept the timber provision because we'd received assurances from the Senate that we could follow environmental laws as we implemented the salvage timber cutting. And I wrote the Congress and told them that's exactly what I intended to do. Now, I'm keeping my promise and implementing it with environmental laws in mind. I'm deeply disappointed that both industry and environmentalists have chosen to take us back to the courts. The people of the Northwest deserve better.

Q. TIMBER SALVAGE -- Lawsuit. You just lost a lawsuit on timber sales in the Pacific Northwest that may force you to cut more timber than you wanted. Doesn't this confirm the environmentalists' belief that you should never have signed the rescissions bill in the first place?

A. No, but it is very disappointing. We have worked hard to strike a balance between moving timber and protecting the environment. The lawsuit that I think you're referring to concerns old growth timber, not salvage, and if it stands it could upset the balance we've achieved.

-UP. Are you going to appeal the case?

A. We are very concerned about the decision and the lawyers are sorting out our options right now. We can't announce an appeal until we actually see an order from the judge, which has not yet been issued.

Q: ANWR. What are you going to do about GOP plans to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) to oil drilling?

A: ANWR is a unique wildlife refuge, the only remaining example of its kind. Now, Republicans in Congress are attempting to open up the refuge -- not through a public debate on the merits -- but through the back door as part of the budget process. They know I'd never sign a bill by itself, so they want to attach it to the budget reconciliation and force me to choose between the Arctic Refuge and everything else that's bundled into that bill. It's cynical and wrong.

And, as Alice Rivlin said recently in a letter, I would veto that bill.

Q: REGULATORY REFORM. Is the Dole regulatory reform bill dead? Or, What is your view about regulatory reform?

A: I've worked hard to reform the regulatory burden, and I'm not waiting for Congress. Just a few weeks ago, I announced that the Environmental Protection Agency was deleting 11% of its pages of regulations and revising another 70%. But I cannot allow Congress to roll back the safeguards that protect ordinary Americans. We cannot accept the measures that lobbyists have written into the Republican bills. As currently conceived, those bills would put the safety of our water and our food at risk. Congress should send me a bill that protects health and safety as it reforms regulation. I'd sign that bill, but that will only happen if Congress starts putting people ahead of the special interest lobbyists.

Q: SUPERFUND. You have said in the past that Superfund needs to be reformed. How do you feel about the recent GOP proposals?

A. As you know, I proposed a comprehensive set of Superfund reforms in the last Congress that enjoyed wide, bipartisan support. EPA just announced that we are going to implement most of those reform administratively, so we can spend more money on cleanups and less on lawyers. But under the Superfund bills we have seen from the House and Senate Republicans this year, polluters would no longer have to clean up their messes -- they'd just have to fence them off or take EPA to court. This would be a bonanza for the lawyers and a disaster for everyone else.

Q. SAFE DRINKING WATER. Senators Kempthorne and Chafee are about to introduce a safe drinking water bill that's going to have bipartisan support. Are you willing to support that compromise bill?

A. I will only support a bill that protects the right of all Americans to safe drinking water. Chairman Chafee and Senator Kempthorne have shown that we can make real progress when Congress decides to approach environmental issues on a bipartisan basis. We still have a number of concerns about their bill, but we are hoping that with some work, the committee will be able to produce a responsible, protective bill that we can support.

Q: ENDANGERED SPECIES ACT. What are your views on the reauthorization of the Endangered Species Act?

A. The Endangered Species Act is one of our most important environmental laws. However, in the past, it has sometimes been used in a way that hurts people. We have dramatically reversed the practices of the last two Administrations by implementing it in a more flexible way. We announced a number of specific policies designed to promote the use of better science and more involvement by state, local and tribal governments. And with my reforms, the vast majority of homeowners will never again have to worry about endangered species restrictions. For reauthorization, we recommended some specific changes to Congress, but we haven't seen much progress in that regard. The first GOP endangered species bill, introduced in the Senate, was written by industry lobbyists. Not surprisingly, it's a threat to the environment.

BACKGROUND: The Department of Interior recently testified on the House counterpart to ESA and said they would recommend a veto. Among other things, it includes a takings provision, which we'd threatened to veto by itself.

Q: GRAZING. Do you support Domenici's Livestock Grazing Act and will your Administration continue with its Rangeland Reform rules?

A: The Domenici bill would cut the public out of decision.

-making on public lands. Decisions would be made behind closed doors without input from hunters, fishers, hikers and other members of the public who have an interest in public lands. I don't support that approach.

BACKGROUND. On August 21 Secretary Babbitt's Rangeland Reform went into effect. Resource Advisory Councils have been established in every western state with members appointed after consultation with the governors of the states. They held their first meetings on September 21 and have all stakeholders sitting at the table -- the livestock industry, hunters, conservationists, and state officials. If the current Interior Appropriations bill were to become law, it would put a 90 day moratorium on Interior's grazing rules. We cannot support that, but it is not one of our highest priorities; among other things, the 90 days may be almost up by the time the bill becomes law.

Q: PUBLIC LANDS TRANSFER. What do you think about the Hansen proposal to turn BLM lands over to the states?

A: It's an awful idea. Those public lands contain the nation's resource treasures -- $100 billion of minerals alone. They're where we hunt, where we fish and where we hike. What responsible public official would want to give away our grandchildren's heritage and get nothing in return? It's short

-sighted and wrong.

BACKGROUND: This is HR 2032, by Hansen (R

-UT); there's a companion S 1031 by Thomas (R

-WY). It literally allows states to claim BLM lands without any compensation to the taxpayers. They've had difficulty finding sponsors because it's so extreme, but it's attracted a great deal of attention recently, in part because people are using it as an example of the extremism of the GOP congress. We have expressed outrage at the bill's extremism, and skepticism that it will get very far. But it has not yet arrived at the point where the White House is making veto threats.

ENVIRONMENT -- WASHINGTON STATE

Q: SALMON / BONNEVILLE POWER: What are you doing to help solve BPA's competitiveness problems and keep salmon mitigation on track?

A: We are working with Chairman Hatfield, Senators Murray and Baucus and other members of the delegation, plus Governors Kitzhaber and Lowry on that. Bonneville does have financial problems, and while they're not due to salmon recovery, we can't let salmon costs grow endlessly. We think those problems can be solved without waiving environmental laws, which we do not support.

BACKGROUND: There may be legislative action on this through the Energy and Water appropriation. Senator Gorton and others would simply like to waive environmental laws. We believe that we can use a variety of administrative approaches to ensure that BPA power rates do not rise because of fish costs and have offered those ideas to Hatfield and others.

ENVIRONMENT -- STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Q: WARD VALLEY: What happened with the Ward Valley negotiations? Do you support legislation to turn the site over to the State of California?

A: A few months ago, the Department of the Interior agreed to transfer the Ward Valley site to the State of California, provided the proper public health safeguards were in place. These safeguards -- recommended by the National Academy of Science -- are designed to protect the people of Southern California. We were disappointed to hear that the State has apparently refused to make a legally

-binding commitment to put these public health safeguards in place and supported a legislative proposal to turn over the site without enforceable public protection.

BACKGROUND: Ward Valley is the proposed site of a low

-level

radioactive waste site -- the kind you get from hospitals. The State recently broke off negotiations and supported a legislative effort to turn over the land without environmental safeguards. The Administration and the State had resolved most of the substantive issues, except whether or not the environmental safeguards (which they had agreed to in principle) would be legally enforceable -- or whether the people near the plant would just have to take the State's word that they will be followed.

Q: BAY

-DELTA / CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT. Do you support attempts to sell the Central Valley Project to agriculture interests who use the water? Or, attempts to weaken the environmental standards associated with the project?

A: The Administration opposed that attempt to sell the Central Valley Project, and it stalled in the face of opposition from urban water users, business interests, Senators Feinstein and Boxer and others. We also don't want to weaken environmental standards. Our Bay

-Delta agreement has lent much needed stability to the water situation and we don't want to upset that balance.

BACKGROUND: We don't necessarily oppose a sale 'on principle' but the recent proposals are widely believed to be unworkable.

Q: COASTAL SALMON. What is happening with coastal coho salmon?

A: In order to start bringing the salmon back, the National Marine Fisheries Service (DOC) recently proposed to list 3 populations of Pacific coastal coho salmon in OR and CA as threatened species and 2 other populations as candidates for that listing. It is the first step in a 1.5 - 2 year listing process that involves extensive public comment. We're acting to provide the states and affected parties maximum room for flexibility and innovation, which can be achieved with this listing.

BACKGROUND: This is different than the Columbia River salmon / Bonneville issue that could come up in the context of Washington State.

MEMORANDUM FOR LEON PANETTA

From: Katie McGinty

Subject: Draft remarks on rescissions bill

Following are my comments on the rescissions statement. I discussed this with the Vice President in Russia for about a half hour, and he feels strongly that we should say "prepared" to sign, and we should include the transition statement about how this is a good bill "on balance."

DRAFT 3/ POTUS STATEMENT ON RESCISSIONS BILL

I am pleased that we have reached an agreement with Republicans and Democrats in the Congress on the rescissions bill.

I vetoed the original rescissions bill because it reduced the deficit the wrong way instead of the right way.

The new bill achieves the same amount of deficit reduction as the previous bill, but it restores a substantial amount of the investments in children, education, national service, job training, and the environment that Congress wanted to eliminate. These are the kind of balanced priorities that make sense for our country as we enter the difficult budget debates ahead.

Like the original bill, the new legislation contains $16.2 billion in deficit reduction, and it provides the supplemental funds I requested for disaster relief activities of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Federal response to the bombing in Oklahoma City, increased anti relief to Jordan to facilitate progress toward a Middle East

Barry,

We sent these by fax a bit ago. This version is a little better edited, I think, but the same additions.

Katie spoke to the Vice President in Russia for about 1/2 hour and he feels strongly about getting in the transition sentence about "on balance" and about saying "prepared" to sign. Shelley said that the part about continuing to voice "opposition" to the rider seemed to be something that TJ and Martha agreed with.

Jack Quinn suggested sending these edits to Leon with a memo from Katie on the discussion with VPOTUS. That's on the way, but hopefully this faster email does that job.

We have now achieved a bill that I am prepared to sign. This is essential legislation, and I hope the Congress will act on it quickly. While on balance, I believe we made such significant changes that I am able to sign the legislation, the Media Affairs may wish to put in the background the President's most recent poll numbers in Michigan. An EPIC/MRA poll conducted April 17-20 (i.e. prior to the Oklahoma incident) reported that the President has a 48% favorable/45% unfavorable personal favorability ratio and a 38% positive/60% negative job rating. By contrast, Gov. John Engler (R) has a 68% favorable/27% unfavorable personal ratio and a 64% positive/36% negative job performance ratio.

The following two questions are a local spin on a national story (the Oklahoma bombing) and the answers to them should come from the people who are handling that issue. They deal with broad issues -- the President's comments on "angry voices," the Michigan Militia, ATF and Waco -- and he will likely be prepped on them anyway. He should be made aware of this Michigan angle, however.

Q. Rep. Dick Chrysler (R-MI) said recently that "liberal media accomplices" are behind the idea that the harshness of the right's anti-government rhetoric has poisoned the atmosphere in this country to an extent that could lead -- and perhaps already has led -- to violence. Of the Michigan Militia, Chrysler said, "a majority of them are just good, civic-minded people who believe in the Constitution, and 99 percent of them are doing a good job."

Do you have any comment on his remarks?

Q. Chrysler has joined a rising chorus of conservative voices calling for a serious reduction of authority -- possibly even a dismantling of -- the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. (Phil Gramm is another such voice.) What do you think of their criticism of ATF? What do you think about their charge that ATF has lost the confidence of the American people in the wake of the Waco incident? What should ATF's role be?

We do not want to raise the Michigan primary issue but the President should be prepared in the event it comes up.

Q. There has been some talk about changing Michigan's primary system from a closed primary to an "open" one, opening up each party's primaries to voters of other party affiliations or no party affiliation at all. Would you support such a move?

A. This is a local issue and the judgement on this will have to come from your citizens and elected leaders, as well as party officials in the state. Naturally I'll abide by whatever decision comes out of that process.
